Who am I? What do I even mean when I say I? What is this self that I cultivate? In a world teeming with images that present definitions of uniqueness and individuality, the School of Humanities invites you to face such questions with informed confidence, insight, and creativity. Join a team of professors from the School of Humanities explore the meaning of identity and the self from the perspectives of literature, philosophy, theology, and the arts. Discussions shall revolve around the factors and forces that affect the development and maintenance of personal identity. At certain stages in the course, professors from the social science disciplines will also be invited to share their views on the themes. Discover the secrets of the enduring self and recognize the paths to human flourishing in the world with others. This first semester SY 2013-2014 in SOH 101, every TTh 10:30 to 12 noon.
